STILL INSISTS HE'S ROGER TICHBORNE

Proof by Woman Who Knows Him Has No Effect on Ferris.

IS NOW IN HOSPITAL.

Mrs. Earle Says She Has Been Acquainted With Him for 55 Years and He Is Ferris.

In spite of the proofs offered by Mrs. S. Earle, of No. 21 Beekman street, Charles O. Ferris, who is dying in the Hudson Street Hospital, still maintains that he is the lost Sir Roger Tichborne. In fact, Ferris, when taken to the hospital, gave his name as Charles Roger Douglas Tichborne.

At her home in Beekman street to-day Mrs. Earle, who has befriended Tichborne for the past nine years, laughed at the romantic stories of his being the lost heir to the Tichborne estate, with which Ferris has besieged lawyers and newspapers from time to time.

"Charles Ferris married my sister, Jane Eliza Williams, in 1858, and he lived with his daughter Jennie before he came to me. Once he deserted this daughter at the death of my sister and went with his second wife to California. He has a family there now."

"How can he be Lord Tichborne? Tichborne disappeared in 1845, and in 1857 Ferris was in Brooklyn. Why, my brother and he were sailors together, and John Dick, the janitor of the Pension Office in Willoughby street, Brooklyn, used to chum with him in the uniforms."

Thinks He Is Insane.

"Ferris is an impostor, as his record in getting a pension from the government shows. He served three years and six months in prison for his pension escapade."

"I really believe Ferris is insane on the subject of being Sir Roger Tichborne, for when we catch him in terrible stories he stubbornly sticks to them."

"You know he even denied that he had even had any children in the hope of establishing his identity with the lost heir."

"He has endeavored to fool people from time to time, and once, in 1881, he induced W. H. L. Barnes, a prominent San Francisco lawyer, to take up his case. After spending thousands of dollars on the case Barnes became convinced that Ferris was an impostor and dropped it."

"Charles Ferris has done everything to try to make people believe he was Tichborne, but as a matter of fact he is a younger man than the lost heir."

"Only the other day my little grandchild discovered him trying to take out some of the tattoo marks on his arm. I suppose he had too many to correspond with Tichborne."

Known Him Fifty-five Years.

"I have known Charles Ferris ever since I was five years old, and I am now over sixty. There is one mark of identification he can never change—his eyes. When I was a child he was always with me. He was a sailor, and I remember him as being a sailor. He was a sailor, and I remember him as being a sailor."

"Why, in 1857, his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Earle, told me that he was a sailor. He was a sailor, and I remember him as being a sailor."

"It seems a coincidence, doesn't it, that while he denies he was Ferris he still insists he's Roger Tichborne?"

HOLDS MAN FOR SPRECKLES KILLING

John O. Welch Remanded by Coroner to Await Grand Jury's Action.

At the inquest held to-day in the death of Ferdinand Spreckles, the saloon-keeper who was killed with a billiard cue in his saloon at Eagle and Westchester avenues on March 30, John O. Welch was held for the Grand Jury. This action was taken by Coroner Schwann after the coroner's jury had found that the dead man had come to his death at the hands of persons unknown. They ignored the testimony of one William J. Chappell, who declared that Welch had committed the deed.

Chappell said that on the night of the killing there had been a quarrel between Spreckles and Welch and that the latter had threatened to give the saloonkeeper a "love tap" with the butt of a billiard cue he carried in his pocket.

Chappell and Welch left the saloon at midnight. Chappell said Welch went back after his rubber and that when he returned he found Welch through the window he saw Spreckles run from the rear room with Welch in pursuit and Welch striking him with the cue. The two fled that night and were followed to New Haven, Providence, Newport and finally back to this city where they were arrested by Detective Price's men. Chappell was held in $1,500 bail as a witness. Welch was the most unscrupulous of all and smoked cigarettes while the jury was deliberating.

DIES THROUGH INHALING GAS.
 Mrs. Emma Wilson, twenty-seven years old, a widow, of No. 8 West One Hundred and Third street, who inhaled gas in her home last Thursday, died to-day in the J. Wood Wright Hospital.

Should know all about my sister and would come to me for a home. "Ferris claims he was born in England, but there are positive proofs of his being born in Brooklyn."

Injured in California.

"As to the story on the back of his neck, which Ferris received when he was a boy in California, I for the life he was injured in California. I for the life he was injured in California."

The real Lord Tichborne, whom Ferris claims to be, is other than himself, was lost at sea when the ship Bella went down with all on her way from Rio Janeiro in 1854. In 1857 a claimant named Arthur Orton demanded the estate, but after being the appeal he was sentenced to ten years imprisonment for perjury. Ferris has been the most persistent claimant since the Orton episode.
